

DOMESTIC INCIDENT - AUTHORISED SYNTHETIC EXTRACT

Event reference: INVALID-DV-MOULDEN-2021.

Attendance date: 16 March 2021.

Location: 3 Ruse Street, Moulden NT 0830.

Respondent: Callum James Hartigan, born 17 August 1994.

Protected person proposed: Jessica Tran, adult partner.

Reporting route: neighbour reported loud argument; attending crew dispatched.

Attending members: fictional officers Neri Pell and Soren Vale; no badge numbers.

Extract author: Neri Pell; entered after attendance on 16 March.

On arrival officers heard raised voices inside the residence. Ms Tran came to the door and was spoken with separately from Mr Hartigan. There was visible damage to the hallway wall, described below. Mr Hartigan remained at the residence while officers obtained the parties' accounts. Neither party reported being struck in this incident. No injury requiring medical attendance was observed or reported to the crew.

Jessica Tran's daughter, aged 6, was present in the residence and was crying during the argument in which Callum punched the hallway wall.

That timing was recorded from Ms Tran's account; officers also observed the child crying on arrival.

The child was not interviewed for a statement during this attendance. Her name has been suppressed in the authorised extract. This narrative does not contain a child's account of what she saw or heard. The notation above is retained from the attending officer's narrative and is not replaced by a later inference from the absence of a child interview.

Ms Tran stated that the argument concerned money and separation arrangements. She said the respondent punched the hallway wall during the argument and she was frightened by the force of it. Officers observed a hole in plaster at approximately adult shoulder height. No damaged door lock, weapon or thrown household implement was recorded during the inspection.

The crew separated the parties for discussion and explained the intended protective steps. A police-initiated domestic violence order was prepared. No criminal charge was laid from this attendance. The order and service details are recorded separately. The absence of a charge is an outcome of the attendance, not a withdrawal of the observations printed in this extract.

PARTY ACCOUNTS AND OBSERVATIONS

Event: INVALID-DV-MOULDEN-2021; account entered 16 March 2021.

Officer notes are paraphrased except where quotation marks are used.

Ms Tran said the argument had become louder over several minutes. She described the respondent as angry about discussion of who would leave the residence. She said he struck the wall with his fist and that she did not know whether he would stop. She did not report that he struck her. Officers observed that she was upset while describing the argument. She asked for the argument to end and for arrangements that would prevent another confrontation that evening.

Mr Hartigan acknowledged punching the wall. He said he was frustrated about money and the relationship. He said, 'I hit the wall, I didn't hit her.' The officer told him that property damage during an argument can make another person fear violence even without physical contact. He said he understood the explanation. His complete account of the child's whereabouts was not obtained in this extract.

Observation table:

Hallway plaster | one fresh-looking hole | photographed for event record

Respondent's hand | reddening noted | treatment declined

Adult complainant | upset, able to speak | no injury reported

Kitchen and entry | no other damage noted in inspection | limited inspection

Weapons disclosed | none | no seizure

Alcohol observation | no reliable intoxication assessment recorded | no test

The photographs are not reproduced in this text export. The damage description remains in the narrative. No repair invoice, builder report or tenancy claim was available to officers at attendance. This extract does not claim the whole house was searched or that every room was inspected.

The accounts concern a domestic argument and a protective response. No allegation of sexual conduct, exploitation or a direct strike to the child is recorded. The child's presence notation on the first page remains a material observation even though she was not interviewed. Officers were concerned about the immediate atmosphere and preventing escalation between the adults. They did not assess the respondent for a coaching position, which was not a subject of the attendance.

PROTECTIVE ACTION AND SERVICE NOTES

Date: 16 March 2021.

Respondent identity confirmed for exercise: name and birth date supplied.

Proposed protected person: Jessica Tran.

Authority used: police-initiated domestic violence order under the Domestic and Family Violence Act 2007.

Subsequent court record: confirmation listed for 22 March 2021.

Order duration recorded: commencement 16 March 2021; expiry 15 March 2022.

Officers explained the protective conditions to the respondent and gave him the written copy. The conditions prohibit domestic violence towards the protected person, intimidation, threats and property damage used against her. Routine necessary communications were to avoid confrontational direct contact and follow the arrangements described on the order. The crew did not promise that the parties could resolve all housing issues that night.

Service control entries:

Respondent spoken with separately | yes

Order copy delivered | yes, attendance date

Protected person given process information | yes

Court confirmation date explained | yes

Respondent advised to obtain legal advice | yes

Immediate further attendance requested before crew departure | no

Charge laid from event | no

Custody transfer recorded | no

The police response was protective. It did not result in a conviction for wall damage or an assault charge. The crew's decision not to lay a charge should not be transcribed as a finding that no intimidating conduct occurred. The underlying observations and reported fear remain in the event record.

The protected person was given information about seeking help if the order was breached. No real helpline number is reproduced in this synthetic export. Contact placeholders appear only as 08 7000 0xxx and example.invalid email addresses. The text is intended to preserve what an assessor would need from a police incident account, not to instruct an actual person how to obtain a protective order.

Officer completion note: parties separated for remainder of attendance; no further argument occurred in officers' presence; event closure pending order-processing tasks. That observation is limited to the time officers were there. It does not say what happened during the full evening before or after the crew's presence, beyond the source accounts already recorded. Related court order attached separately.

FOLLOW-UP AND STATUS EXTRACT

Record reviewed for release: 25 September 2026.

Underlying event date: 16 March 2021.

Order status cross-reference: INVALID-DVO-CJH-2021.

Court confirmation: 22 March 2021, no variation listed.

Order expiry: 15 March 2022.

Linked breach-search result: no breach recorded during the order period.

Associated charge search: no criminal charge from this event.

Subsequent police incident account in this extract: none included.

Program referral information: general service information provided; no program attendance evidence held in this event export.

The follow-up fields provide administrative status only. They do not answer whether the child witnessed the argument, heard the wall being punched or experienced continuing distress. No interview or later statement from the child is present in this file. No later statement from Jessica Tran about the child's whereabouts is attached to the released event extract.

The officers' first-page narrative states the child was present and crying. The release review does not supply an independent reconstruction of her movements. The narrative remains a contemporaneous police account; whether it needs clarification for screening is a matter for the assessor. Nothing in this status page reconciles it with a candidate statement supplied years later.

Routine closure tasks:

Order service entry completed; court confirmation entry linked; protected person notification entered; paper file indexed under current surname; event photograph reference retained without image; archived narrative made available for authorised purpose. No final criminal disposition number appears because this attendance did not produce a charge.

The distinction between an expired order and the event prompting it is retained. An order can finish without breach while the original event still has relevance to an assessment of behaviour. This status extract offers no prediction of future risk and no clearance recommendation. No child protection finding is certified here. Agency information, if sought for a screening purpose, requires its own response rather than an assumption from a blank status field.

Released by fictional police records supervisor for the synthetic candidate-authorised case. Contact: dv.records@example.invalid; telephone 08 7000 0xxx. No real event number, officer code or victim contact is included.

RELEASE INVENTORY AND SOURCE LIMITS

Export date: 25 September 2026.

Pages released: five narrative and control pages.

Recipient purpose: NT child-related employment screening, fictional case.

Candidate consent: application signed 21 September 2026.

Contents retained:

Attendance circumstances and child-presence sentence.

Separate adult accounts and observed wall damage.

Protective action and order service notes.

Order follow-up status, breach and charge fields.

This release inventory.

Contents not supplied: event photographs; any audio recording; a statement from the child; a later statement from Ms Tran; tenancy repair evidence; a clinical assessment; child protection agency records. The absence of these items from this packet is a source limitation. It is not evidence that an assessment of the child's exposure has been completed elsewhere.

The text has been prepared to retain the material observations in the incident narrative. It has not been rewritten to match a later personal statement. The first-page observation is a clear sentence capable of being quoted; the record separately notes that the child was not interviewed. Those two facts can both be true. The release clerk does not decide what the child actually saw during the argument.

Matching details: current surname Hartigan, birth date 17 August 1994; residence Moulden at event date; former surname Byrne retained in alias field; no duplicate event under the former surname in this packet. Invalid source references identify one fictional event across the narrative, order and national-history index.

Administrative privacy handling: the child's personal name is suppressed, as is the neighbour's identity. The protected adult's name is fictional and retained to link the papers. No usable telephone, address for the protected person, signature image or real officer identifier is exported. The Moulden address is a fictional case address supplied by the fixture specification.

This inventory is a delivery record. It is not a risk conclusion, proof of program completion or confirmation of the candidate's later residential history. Follow-up requests should distinguish a source clarification from a request for newly available information. The officer narrative remains dated March 2021. The release date indicates when it was copied, not when the incident occurred. End of authorised synthetic incident extract.
